PREFACE.

HE original edition of Dr. Arnold's Collection of CATHEDRAL MUSIC, was published by subscription, in four volumes folio, dedicated to the King, at the close of the year 1790. The reasons for the publication will be best explained by the Doctor's own words, extracted from the beginning of his Preface :

" As the late Dr. Boyce lived only to compleat three volumes of Cathedral Music, and as many of the valuable works of the English composers (who were so eminent in that stile of writing), which he had no room to insert in his work, appear to me to be worthy of preservation, I have undertaken a Supplement to it, trusting it will not be unacceptable to the remaining few, who have judgment to taste their sublimities, and liberality enough to encourage it.

" Indeed, I am well aware that the encouragement will not be great, as it is not the fashion to study Church, so much as Secular Music ; and if the Cathedrals and Churches in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, where Choir Service is performed (and for whose use this work was principally intended), do not encourage it, the time may come, when this sublime, though much neglected, stile of composition (so well understood by our forefathers), will be totally lost in this kingdom."

The Doctor's forebodings proved, alas ! too true, and it does not appear, from the list appended to the work, that more than one hundred and twenty copies were subscribed for. Nevertheless, in the course of time, the work has obtained a celebrity, which from its extreme utility it so amply merits. The great scarcity, and consequent high price, of copies at the present time, together with the increasing demand for this species of Music, seemed a sufficient reason for a New Edition.

The order in which the Services and Anthems follow in the old edition is strictly adhered to in the present publication ; and no alterations have been made in the Music, but what are authorized by a careful collation of the several original MSS. preserved in our Cathedrals and elsewhere ; for it not unfrequently happens that two or more copies of the same Anthem present some slight deviation from one another. In this case I have availed myself of that version which appeared to me to be the most correct, and the most consonant to the design of the Author.

The Chants, which in the original edition are scattered throughout the work, are here placed together (in a more convenient form) at the end of the last volume.

EDWARD F. RIMBAULT, F.S.A.

THE REV. HENRY ALDRICH, D.D. was an eminent scholar and an excellent divine; he was born in Westminster in or about the year 1647, and educated at Westminster school under the famous Dr. Busby. In 1662 he was admitted a student on the foundation of Christ-Church College, Oxford, and he took his degree of Master of Arts in April 1669. Entering not long afterwards into holy orders, he distinguished himself by his great proficiency in various branches of learning, and became a celebrated tutor in the college. On the 15th of February 1681, he was installed a canon of Christ-Church, and in May following accumulated the degrees of Bachelor and Doctor in Divinity. In the controversy with the Papists, in the reign of King James the Second, he bore a considerable share, and by that means rendered his merit so conspicuous, that when at the Revolution, Massey, the popish dean of Christ-Church, fled from the country, his deanery was conferred on Dr. Aldrich. In this eminent station he presided with a dignity peculiar to his person and character, behaving with great integrity and uprightness, attending assiduously to the interests of his college, and to the welfare of those under his care; and promoting, to the utmost of his abilities, learning, religion, and virtue.

At one period of his life (the precise date is not known), Dr. Aldrich visited Italy, and it was probably during his residence there that he amassed, or at least laid the foundation of, that collection of music, which at his death he bequeathed to his college. Dr. Burney has asserted, that for masses, madrigals, and anthems of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, it was the most complete of any he had the opportunity of consulting.

After presiding over his college upwards of twenty years, respected by his equals and superiors, looked up to with almost filial reverence by his scholars, and beloved by all who came within his sphere of action, Dr. Aldrich died on the 14th of December 1710, in the sixty-third or sixty-fourth year of his age. He was buried in his own church, and the following well-deserved eulogium is traced over his grave,—

HENRICUS ALDRICH, S.T.P. ÆDIS CHRISTI DECANUS ET GRANDE TOTIUS ACADEMIÆ ORNAMENTUM.

WILLIAM CHILD was a native of Bristol, and received his education under Elway Bevin, organist of the cathedral of that city. In 1631, being then of Christ-Church, Oxford, he took the degree of Bachelor in Music; and in 1636 was appointed one of the organists of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, in the room of Dr. John Munday, and soon after was promoted to an organist's place in the Royal Chapel, Whitehall. After the restoration he held the office of chanter of the King's Chapel, and became one of the chamber-musicians to Charles the Second. In 1663, the University of Oxford conferred on him the degree of Doctor in Music. He died in 1696, having attained the age of ninety-one years, and was succeeded as organist of the King's Chapel by Mr. Francis Piggot.

Dr. Child's principal productions, remarks an accomplished critic, are his services and full anthems, printed in Dr. Boyce's and Dr. Arnold's collections. His service in D is one of the finest specimens of writing in the fugato style extant; and, what is still higher praise, the melody throughout is clear and pleasing, even to modern ears. His verse service in E flat possesses much elegance, and in a style which must have appeared quite new when first produced. That in E minor is rich in modulation, and shows the hand of a master. "His style," Dr. Burney says, was so remarkably easy and natural, compared with that to which choirmen had been accustomed, that it was frequently treated by them with derision." Indeed, his modulation at present is so nearly modern, as not to produce that solemn, and seemingly new, effect on our ears, which we now experience from the productions of the sixteenth century.

The memory of Dr. Child is celebrated for a remarkable act of his generosity, and of the meanness of his superiors. His salary at Windsor was much in arrear, and he in vain applied to the dean and chapter to discharge the debt. After many fruitless appeals, he told them that if they would pay what was due to him, he would new pave the choir of St. George's Chapel. They complied with his terms, and, Sir John Hawkins observes, neither they, nor the Knights Companions of the most noble Order of the Garter, interposed to prevent his incurring such an expense. Such is the account that has been handed down to us by our two historians; but the following version, given upon the authority of Dr. Arnold, exhibits the matter in a somewhat different light. It is well known that during the troubles of Charles the Second, organs were taken away from many of the churches by public authority, and the music books for the use of the choir destroyed. During the ravages of this recess, Dr. Child retired to a small farm, which he then rented, and being possessed with a presentiment that he should live to see the king restored, amused himself in composing many services and anthems, amongst which were, "O, Lord, grant the King a long life;" "O, pray for the peace of Jerusalem;" "If the Lord himself had been on our side;" &c., all of which were words expressive of his wishes and his loyalty. The parts of these services and anthems he caused to be transcribed, and at the restoration, when the service of the Church was resumed, he supplied the choir of the free chapel of St. George, at Windsor, with the produce of his labours. Then it appears he demanded his salary in arrear, which being refused, he commenced a suit to establish his claim. The dean and chapter were thus induced to an immediate compliance, in consequence of which the doctor generously offered to pave the choir; the offer was accepted, and he lived to complete it.

At the coronation of James the Second, Dr. Child walked, as father of the King's Chapel, in his academical robes.

A full length portrait of him, presented by himself, is still preserved in the Music School, Oxford.

JEREMIAH CLARK was educated in the Chapel Royal, under Dr. Blow, and succeeded him as almoner and master of the children of St. Paul's. Clark received these appointments in 1693, and shortly afterwards became the organist of that cathedral. In July 1700, he was appointed a gentleman-extraordinary of the Chapel Royal; and on the 25th of May 1704, was also appointed organist of the said chapel, conjointly with Dr. Croft. A hopeless passion for a lady of a rank much superior to his own, threw him into a state of melancholy, which terminated in suicide in the year 1707. Being thus cut off at an early period of life, his works were few; but his anthems, which are printed in Boyce's Collection, are remarkable for their tender and pathetic expression. His full anthem, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem," is considered the best of his compositions.

WILLIAM CROFT was born at Nether Eatington, in the county of Warwick, in 1677, and educated in the Royal Chapel, under Dr. Blow. His earliest preferment was to the place of organist of St. Anne's, Westminster, where an organ was then for the first time erected. In 1700 he was admitted a gentlemen-extraordinary of the Chapel Royal; and in 1704 was appointed joint-organist of the same with Jeremiah Clark, upon whose decease, in 1707, he obtained the whole place. In the year 1708 he succeeded Dr. Blow, as master of the children and composer to the Chapel Royal, as also in his place of organist of Westminster Abbey.

In the year 1711 he resigned his appointment at St. Anne's in favour of Mr. John Isham, and in the following year published, but without his name, "Divine Harmony, or a new Collection of Select Anthems used at her Majesty's Chapels Royal, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's, &c." This collection, like that of Clifford, published in 1663, contains only the words of the several anthems selected.

In the year 1715, he was created Doctor of Music in the University of Oxford. His exercise for that degree was an English and also a Latin ode, written by Mr. Joseph (afterwards Dr.) Trapp. Both the odes were published in score, under the title of "Musicus Apparatus Academicus."

In the same year an addition was made to the ancient establishment of the Royal Chapel, viz., four gentlemen, a second composer, a harpsichordist, and a violist; and in the warrant was inserted an allowance to Dr. William Croft, as master of the children, of eighty pounds per annum, for teaching them reading, writing, and accompts, and for instructing them also on the organ and in musical composition.

In the year 1724, Dr. Croft published, by subscription, a splendid edition of his choral music, in two volumes, folio, under the title of "Musica Sacra, or Select Anthems in Score." The author says, in his preface, that this work is the first specimen of music in score engraved on plates; choral compositions having been previously printed with types, in single parts, and full of errors.

I shall take this opportunity to correct a statement which has crept into Croft's biography regarding the cause of his death. It is said that he died in the year 1727, of a disease caused by his attendance at the coronation of George the Second. A sufficient refutation of this is conveyed in the following facts: the coronation of George the Second took place on the 11th of October 1727, and Croft died on the 14th of August preceding.

RICHARD FARRANT was a gentleman of the Chapel Royal in 1564, and subsequently became master of the choristers of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, with an allowance of 81*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum for their diet and teaching. He was also organist and one of the clerks of the same chapel. Upon accepting these appointments at Windsor, he resigned his office at St. James's, but was recalled to it in 1569, and held it till the time of his death, which we learn from the old cheque-book of the Chapel occurred in 1580.

JOHN GOLDWIN (or Golding) was a pupil of Dr. Child, and in April 1697 succeeded him as organist of the Chapel of St. George at Windsor. In the year 1703, he received the appointment of master of the children of the same chapel. Both these situations he continued to hold until his death, which took place on the 7th of November 1719. Two fine anthems by this composer, "O, praise God in His holiness," and "I will sing unto the Lord," are contained in Page's "Harmonia Sacra," a new edition of which work is now being prepared by the Editor of the present collection.

JAMES KENT was a native of the city of Winchester, and born on the 13th of March 1700. At an early age he was admitted into the choir of that cathedral, under the superintendence of Vaughan Richardson, the organist. After having been some time in this situation, he became one of the children of the Chapel Royal; here, under the care of Dr. Croft, he laid the foundation of his musical knowledge. The Rev. Sir John Dolben, Bart., a worthy patron of music and musicians, took especial notice of our young chorister, and through his interest Kent was appointed organist of the church of Findon, in Northamptonshire. From Findon he removed to Trinity College, Cambridge, and continued there till about the year 1737, when he succeeded John Bishop as organist to the cathedral and college of Winchester. In the year 1774 he resigned his situation in favour of Peter Fussell. Kent died at Winchester, on the 6th of May 1776, aged seventy-six years, and was buried in the north aisle of that cathedral.

As a composer of sacred music, Kent adhered closely to the style of Dr. Croft; and although his music does not exhibit the learning of his accomplished master, the attention which he gave to melody, and to the sense and meaning of the words, renders it interesting both to learned and unlearned auditors.

Kent married a daughter of Mr. Freeman, a celebrated theatrical singer in Purcell's time, who, after quitting the stage, was admitted one of the gentlemen of the Chapel Royal, and vicar-choral of Westminster Abbey.

CHARLES KING was born at Bury St. Edmund's, in the year 1687. At an early age he came to London, and was admitted a chorister of St. Paul's Cathedral, where he received the first rudiments of his musical education under Jeremiah Clark, then master of the children, almoner, and vicar-choral of that church. In the year 1708 he was admitted to the degree of Bachelor in Music in the University of Oxford: the ode which he performed for his exercise was the "Dialogue between Oliver Cromwell and Charon," which was afterwards set by Henry Hall, organist of Hereford. On the decease of his master, Jeremiah Clark, in July 1707, King was elected almoner and master of the children of St. Paul's; and in October 1730, he was admitted a vicar-choral of that cathedral.

King married a sister of Clark's, who is said to have inherited considerable property from her brother.

Shortly after his election as almoner and master of the children of St. Paul's, he was chosen organist of the parish church of St. Bennett-Fink, near the Royal Exchange, which place he held, in conjunction with his other situations, until his death.

King's compositions for the church were numerous, and his propensity for writing appeared so early, that in the nineteenth year of his age he composed his pleasing service in F, consisting of the "Te Deum," "Magnificat," and "Nunc Dimittis;" the "Kyrie Eleeson" and "Creed" were not added until many years afterwards.

The well-known full service in C was composed in the year 1747, when its author was confined to his room by a long and painful illness, which terminated fatally on the 17th of March 1748.

The following well-known musicians are stated, upon the authority of Dr. Arnold, to have been pupils of Charles King: Dr. Maurice Green, Dr. Alcock, Mr. Robert Hudson, Mus. Bac., Mr. James Baildon, Mr. Samuel Porter, and Mr. Jonathan Battishill.

HENRY LAWES was the son of Thomas Lawes, a vicar choral of Salisbury Cathedral, and probably received the rudiments of his musical education in the choir of that church. With his brother William he was placed under John Cooper, alias Giovanni Coperario, at the expense of Edward Earl of Hertford. In January 1625, he was appointed Pistoler, or Epistoler of the Chapel Royal; at the latter end of the same year he became one of the gentlemen of the choir of that chapel; and soon afterwards clerk of the cheque, and one of the court-musicians to Charles the First. He died in 1662, and was interred in Westminster Abbey.

GIOVANNI PIERLUIGI DA PALESTRINA was born in Palestrina (the Preneste of the ancients), and adopted the distinctive appellation "da Palestrina" from his birth-place. Respecting the date of his birth there is great doubt: the records of Preneste having been destroyed by the Spaniards and Germans who invaded the Roman states in 1557, it is only by ascertaining his age at the time of his death, that the point can be satisfactorily ascertained; and although there is a portrait of this composer preserved among the archives of the Pontifical chapel in the Quirinal, under which is an inscription setting forth that he lived to be near eighty years of age, and died on the 10th of February 1595, which would fix his birth in or about the year 1514, some writers have referred it to the years 1528 or 1529; and even the Abbé Baini, who spent thirty years in collecting the materials for the life of this composer, rejects the authority of the portrait, and relying upon an expression in a dedication to Pope Clement VIII, in which the composer's son says, "Pater meus Johannes Petraloysius septuaginta fere vitæ suæ annos in Dei laudibus componendis consumens," fixes the date of his birth in the year 1524. "To us, however (says an acute critic, in a Memoir of Palestrina, inserted in the "Harmonicon," April 1832), it appears that the nearly seventy years, which, in the above phrase, Palestrina is said to have dedicated to composing the praises of God, cannot be considered as comprising his whole life, and that the authority of the inscription on the portrait is the safest to follow

Palestrina was probably sent to Rome very early in life, and placed as a chorister in one of the churches, in which situation he would have obtained instruction in grammar, singing, and the science of counterpoint. The celebrated and unfortunate Claude Goudimel had established a school in that city, and from him the young Palestrina received the ground-work of his musical education.

In the year 1551, we find Palestrina holding the situation of master of the boys in the Pope's Chapel, where he remained until January 1555, and on the first of October in that year was installed Maestro di Capella, in the Church of St. John in the Lateran. In March 1561, he exchanged his appointment for a more lucrative one at Santa Maria Maggiore, which he held till the 31st of March 1571; when on the death of Animucia he was recalled to his old post in the Vatican.

Palestrina died in the year 1594; and so greatly had he been admired and respected during his life, that his funeral was attended not only by all the musicians of Rome, but by immense crowds of people from that city and neighbourhood. It was celebrated by three choirs, who sung a "Libera me Domine" of his own composition. His body was interred in the Church of St. Peter, before the altar of St. Simon and St. Jude, a privilege due to the merits of so great a man.

I beg to refer those interested in the life and times of Palestrina, to Baini's "Memorie storico-critiche della vita e delle opere di Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, &c." 4to. 2 vols. Rome, 1828.

RICHARD PATRICK. From the records preserved in the Collegiate Church of St. Peter, Westminster, we learn that this musician was a singing man in that choir, between the years 1616 and 1624. The accounts for the years 1625 and 1626 are missing, but in 1627 his name is not mentioned, from which it is natural to suppose that he died between the years 1625 and 1627. This inference is strengthened from the circumstance of his name not being traced in the records of any other collegiate establishment.

Tradition has asserted that Patrick was Organist of Westminster Abbey, but it does not appear that he ever held that appointment officially. It is more than probable that, in former times, the singing men (now called lay-vicars), occasionally assisted the organist in the performance of his duties.

The service printed in the following pages is the only surviving composition of its author. Dr. Arnold remarks that the copies preserved in the various cathedrals, will be found to differ in some few instances. In preparing it for publication, he therefore confined himself to the books of the Chapel Royal and Westminster Abbey, "presuming the most authentic copy will be found in the last-mentioned place where it was performed during the life-time of the author and under his immediate inspection"

HENRY PURCELL was born in the year 1658. The exact place of his birth is not known, but it was probably in London or Westminster, as he was the son of Henry Purcell, a musician engaged in the Metropolis, and attached to the court as a gentleman of the Chapel Royal. From whom he received his first instructions in music, cannot now be ascertained with any degree of certainty, but his father dying in 1664, when he was no more than six years old, it is probable he was qualified for a chorister by Captain Cook, who was master of the children from the restoration till the year 1672; for, as Purcell was appointed organist of Westminster Abbey at eighteen years of age, he must have been taught the elements of his art before his fourteenth year, at which time Pelham Humphrey (brought up in the Chapel Royal under Cook), was appointed his successor as master of the boys. Purcell certainly continued to sing in the chapel, and to receive lessons from Humphrey, until the breaking of his voice; after this he received lessons in composition from Dr. Blow. In the year 1682, upon the decease of Edward Lowe, Purcell became his successor as one of the organists of the Chapel Royal.

Purcell died on the 21st of November, 1695, at the age of thirty-seven.

I may mention that the original MS. of the Anthem contained in the present selection is now, together with many other originals of the same great master, in my library. It was composed upon the supposed pregnancy of King James the Second's Queen, in 1687, when a proclamation was issued for a thanksgiving to be observed on the 15th of January in London and twelve miles round; and on the 29th of the same month, throughout England, for joy of this event. Purcell being then one of the organists of the Royal Chapel, was commanded to compose an anthem, and the result was the production of the beautiful verse anthem for four voices and instruments, beginning "Blessed are they that fear the Lord."

THOMAS TALLIS, one of the greatest musicians that this or any other country produced during the sixteenth century, was born early in the reign of Henry VIII. He is said to have been organist of the Royal Chapel during the reigns of that sovereign, Edward VI, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth; but the inscription on his grave-stone warrants no such assertion: and it is certain that in the reigns of Edward VI and Queen Mary, he was simply a gentleman of the chapel, and served for sevenpence halfpenny per diem. Under Elizabeth, Tallis and Byrd were gentlemen of the chapel, and also organists.

Tallis died on the 23rd of November 1585, and was buried in the parish church of Greenwich in Kent. Strype in his continuation of Stow's Survey, published in 1720, says that, in his circuit walk round London, he found in the chancel of that church, upon a stone before the rails, a brass plate with an inscription to his memory. A copy of the inscription has been preserved, but all traces of the original are lost. The church was rebuilt about the year 1720, and probably all memorials of such eminent persons as had there been interred, were, by the ignorance of those in office, destroyed.

JOHN WELDON was born at Chichester, and educated at Eton College. He first learnt music under John Walter the organist of that College, and afterwards of Henry Purcell. In the year 1696, he was elected organist of New College, Oxford, which situation he resigned at the beginning of the year 1701, in consequence of receiving an appointment as gentleman-extraordinary of the Chapel Royal; and seven years afterwards he succeeded Dr. Blow as organist there. In 1715, upon the establishment of a second composer's place, Weldon was admitted to it. Weldon was organist also of the church of St. Bride; and King George the First having given an organ to the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, he was likewise chosen organist there.

Weldon died in the year 1736, and was buried in the church-yard of St. Paul's, Covent Garden.
